Shadowing and Career Development Support

Shadowing offers a valuable opportunity to observe how the same job can vary depending on the context and how we can enhance our own skills by learning from others. This method of training enables colleagues to ask questions and receive immediate feedback, making it highly effective. It also offers the opportunity to meet professionals in your field and develop your network. At Craighalbert Centre, we also welcome external organisations to shadow us and learn from our practice.

Unique Working Methods

At the Craighalbert Centre, as is the case in many organisations, the concept of the multi- disciplinary team around the child is established.

However, we have taken this concept much further.

All activities are designed to be outcome-focused improving holistic wellbeing. To do this in the most effective, person-centered, and enjoyable way often requires creative approaches that in turn require flexible, integrated, collaborative 'professional' working when planning and delivering learning, care, and therapy.

Collaborative professional work involves a team of professionals from various fields, such as teachers, physiotherapists, occupational therapists, speech therapists, and early years practitioners, working together in a coordinated manner. This offers a collective and cohesive approach to learning and therapy that employs specialist knowledge when required. The objective of delivering services in a holistic manner to individual children and groups of children allows us to blur the edges between the professions; ensuring that the whole of the SCCMI's workforce is greater than the sum of the individual parts.

Our Values

CHILD-CENTERED

The child's will and wellbeing are at the heart of everything we do.

AMBITIOUS

We are not afraid to set challenging goals.

KIND

We are compassionate, generous, and friendly.

INSPIRATIONAL

We seek to stimulate and influence others to improve outcomes for children, young people and adults, and their families

COLLABORATIVE

We work together to achieve the highest possible wellbeing for all.

Location

The Centre is located in Central Scotland with motorway, trains and buses providing excellent transport links and easy access to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Stirling and beyond. Our aim is simple, to support children, young people, and their families to attain and maintain the highest level of holistic wellbeing possible.

Multidisciplinary teams around the child work collaboratively alongside parents maximising the benefit from the Centre and community resources to give children and young people exceptional experiences to achieve ambitious outcomes.

Therapy, care and learning take place in stimulating environments within a welcoming, spacious and pleasant building. Specialist play, therapeutic, educational and communication equipment are employed to assist the child's engagement in, and benefit from activities.

Children receive aquatic therapy in the Centre's custom-designed hydrotherapy pool. Using the grounds' outdoor learning areas, therapeutic equipment and play areas ensure that children have access to a range of learning experiences to promote development.
